There is no branch of mathematics, however abstract, which may not someday be applied to the phenomena of the real world.

Nicolai Lobachevsky (1792-1856)